Galveston hotel to reopen in June after post-Ike repairs

By: Jeri Clausing
April 03, 2009

Galveston's historic Tremont House hotel will reopen in June.

Located in the 1879 Leon H. Blum Building in the heart of historic downtown Galveston, the hotel's first floor was flooded during Hurricane Ike last year.

The hotel's restored lobby and Toujouse Bar area will continue to reflect a European-style hotel decorated in black, white, grey and green palettes. The Toujouse Bar, which dates back to the 1870s, was not damaged by the storm.

A new cafe has been added, and it will transform into a wine bar at night.

The hotel's fitness center as well as all of its first floor meetings space will also be completely redone.
