Get ready to witness one of the Calgary Stampede's most thrilling, adrenaline pumping highlights - the Chuckwagon Races, otherwise known as the GMC Rangeland Derby!

Celebrating the Chuckwagon Race's 94rd annual Stampede run, these men and horses are primed and chomping at the bit to show you great racing. The history of how these races came to be explains the high level of enthusiasm that exists today.

Camping out on the open range, the chuckwagon became home for many pioneer cowboys. After a grueling day in the hot sun, the "chucks" would be pulled to a halt, and circled round a crackling campfire. During the evening hours, strumming sounds of the guitar often accompanied light-hearted laughter, and for these men, home became the land surrounding them.

But when it came time to close up camp and head into town, the anticipation of the trip would send hoots and hollers among the ranks. Excitement would start to rise as each man knew what was ahead. At one point, the journey back and forth to town became a monotonous venture. To spruce up this foray, the rough and rugged cowboys decided to race their chuckwagons to town, with the last to arrive paying for the first round in the closest saloon.

Today's chuckwagon races are even more exciting and intense. When the dust settles on the track after the thundering hooves pass over the finish line, one team emerges victorious. The 2017 chuckwagon purse holds $1,154,400, to be claimed over the ten days and the Calgary Stampede salutes GMC as the proud sponsor of the GMC Rangeland Derby.

Although the fastest rig crosses the finish line first, there's a lot more to contend with before a winner can be declared. The rules are rigorously enforced, and each driver must be fully versed in these rules so as not to incur any penalties or fines before, during or after the race. A penalty consists of precious seconds and the loss of this time could mean a missed opportunity in both the Aggregate Award, where a brand new GMC truck is on the line, and the opportunity to race in the $150,000 final heat, where the champion claims $100,000.
